

My experience on teaching the kid of my maid was super fun. Since he already knew me ,there was no introduction needed. As I approached him by asking "How did school go today " he just smiled. Then I asked him " shall I teach you an action song?" Again he just smiled.Then I asked him " Do you know any song, can you sing it for me " he didn't reply. When he didn't talk, I triggered him by asking him what are all the cartoons you watch? Then he automatically replies to me and then he keeps talking about every cartoon he watches and that is how he got comfortable with me .When teaching a kid you need hell a lot of patience within you . My teaching style was like I started with an action song which had some weird actions to do which made him smile .Initially he didn't do it but I kept singing the song ,Gradullay he sang along with me doing the action. I read him a short story he was intrigued. He was very cute . Later he got very comfortable with me I taught him basic addition which was a little hard for him to pick up as maths was new to him.He eventually got bored so I said we'll play some games gave him a chocolate for bearing with me and he left with a smile .I understood that even teaching a single child has its own hardship whether he will get along with you or whether he will like your style of teaching. And then I thought he/ she should really have the courage to teach the children in the class as each one them would have a different mindset and grasping ability.Even though it is small part which I taught him I felt very contempt .
