

ASIEVOLVE - TASK 1

SESSION-3 - Experience shared

Every child is different kind of flower
All together they make this world a beautiful garden.

I love children, because they are innocent.

Sunshine, smiles and boundless curiosity, that's what Childhood is all about. Recently I saw a siblings near traffic signal, They called me "Anna! ~~We~~ hungry please get some food for us. I felt bad, because though it is a ~~modern~~ so called modernized Era, still there are many children, without basic needs of a human. Then I have called them, went to hotel near by, I have get them food for breakfast.

~~It was~~ After having, breakfast, I have started Conversation with them, I asked, why you are not going to school? They said, we are ~~parent~~ single parent, they are from Dharmapuri. They are selling pens and keychains in the signal, To take care of their mother. Since her mother not sell.
Then I asked them, Shall we spend some time together, They said okay. Then we moved to empty space, near that hotel. It was very memorable to me. These kids whom no one paid much attention to and also more often than lauded all educational resources. Then I took this chance to provide some experience in learning, They goes school, after this quarterly hoding. First I distributed a sample of story books, appropriate to reading level of children & encouraged interaction by asking them guess, predict, and share thoughts or experiences, then they could associate with the stories. I think, somewhat their literacy skills and made them think critically and communicate better. After the story time, I transitioned to elementary mathematics, I engaged in simple counting activities, later combining them with more complex ideas like addition and basic forms. I did many hands on activities and used concrete visual aids, so that they could understand easily.

Throughout the session, I would observe, their engagement, curiosity and ~~innocence~~ interest in the children. I gave individual attention to both, one elder said I want become IAS, younger said I want to become scientist in the future. I gave some ideas to them to study well. I have managed to provide personalized attention to children and difficulties that might arise in their specified areas.

What has mattered the most in this experience has been seeing the progression of these young minds and enjoyed they took from this entire process of learning. I watched them with more confidence, some thing they will achieve in their life. The sense of accomplishment and how their faces lit up in excitement, when they figured some thing out. true appreciation, they expressed was heart wrenching.
